

artnet news: '10 Emerging Artists to Keep on Your Radar', by Henri Neuendorf, November 21st, 2016

Every year thousands of young artists in the early stages of their career help shape the dynamic and constantly changing landscape of contemporary art.

Here we collect a selection of the most talented newcomers from around the world. Working in an array of different mediums, the artists all have very distinct and diverse practices and visual languages, each with the potential to shape the future of contemporary art.

Eric Mack Tent (2015). Photo: Courtesy of the artist.

10. Eric Mack

Incorporating found objects on painted wall-mounted fabrics and quilts, the New York-based artist's work leans on the legacy of Abstract Expressionism but reinterprets it in a contemporary way. Mack seeks to present painting as an object rather than a two-dimensional surface, via splattered wall-draped carpets and tent-like structures that create immersive painted environments.